COUNCIL HOLDS BUSY SESSION

TRANSFER MEN PETITION FOR LEVYING AN OCCUPATION TAX. BYRD'S MILL CLAIMS REJECTED.

Petitioning to be taxed is considerably out of the ordinary, but that was the text of a petition submitted last evening to the city council by a number of the transfer men of the town. They complain that many who do not follow the business regularly follow it when they have nothing else to do and at times when there is least to haul, and that in order to keep out competition of this kind they are willing to pay a license of $25 per annum on one wagon and $15 on each additional one employed. The petition was referred to the ordinance committee.

The much mooted question of paying off the claims against the Byrd's Mill extension again came up on a motion to pay a batch of claims represented by J. E. Grigsby. The city attorney gave it as his opinion that although the city might be morally responsible for the payment of the claims, he could not find any authority whereby the council could legally pay out the city's funds for the purpose. H. C. Evans, who himself has a claim of over $100 for material furnished Johnson, was of the same opinion and seconded a motion by Ellison that the claims be disallowed on the grounds that the council does not see how they can be legally paid. A majority of the body have expressed a willingness to allow the proved claims if it can be legally done, and it is probable that a test suit will be brought to determine the matter once for all.

The referendum petition of citizens desiring an election on the ordinance vacating Stockton avenue for depot purposes was submitted and referred to the city attorney.

J. L. Barringer submitted a petition asking that a tract of ten acres on the outskirts of the city belonging to him be excluded from the city limits.

The fire chief was authorized to expend $76.50 for rubber coats, caps, etc., for the fire boys.

The engineer's estimate of the cost of laying the sewer in District No. 4 was submitted, the total amount being $1,490. This amount was distributed equally among the lots affected, the share of each being $23.28 and an assessing ordinance adopted accordingly.

A contract with the Ada Electric and Gas Co. was submitted and the mayor and city clerk ordered to sign same on behalf of the city.

Clark, Evans and Timberlake were appointed as a special committee to confer with the property owners in North Ada regarding the damages to be allowed because of the closing of Stockton avenue by the new Frisco depot.

McAlester Holds Celebration.

McAlester, Ok., Feb. 26.—One of the greatest celebrations ever witnessed in McAlester was that tonight over the passage of the Owen-Carter bill providing for the sale of the segregated coal lands. Thousands of people thronged the streets and witnessed a parade, during the explosion of much powder and fireworks.

A salute of twenty-one guns announced the starting of the parade. Military companies, the fire department, scores of automobiles, the members of the Commercial Club and hundreds of other citizens on foot made up the procession.

There was speaking at the Busby Theater. Henry P. Robbins made the opening speech and was followed by United States Senator Robert L. Owen. Both spoke at length of the struggle for the legislation just enacted and of the great benefits to accrue to the coal district of this side of the state. Other speeches were made, all these being limited to five minutes. Representative Charles D. Carter is ill in Washington and could not be present. There were constant cheers for him and for Senator Owen.

GOOD ROADS SPECIAL OVER THE FRISCO

With his usual broad-minded policy, Mr. B. F. Yoakum of the Frisco System has made arrangements with the Office of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture to send a Good Roads Special Train over the entire Frisco System. The government's equipment on this train is the most up-to-date for illustrating methods of road improvement ever exhibited. It will require four especially equipped cars to carry this unusual exhibit. There will be exhibited models of every type of road construction, from the sand-clay and gravel roads to the most expensive type of bituminous-macadam; also miniature road machinery and rock quarries in operation; as well as the most improved types of bridges and culverts in construction. Illustrated lectures will be given at each stop, and the farmers and road supervisors along the Frisco Lines will have an opportunity to see illustrated the most beautiful roads of the world.

This Good Roads Train will cover about fifteen thousand miles of track, or about five times the distance between Washington and San Francisco. More than three hundred towns will be visited and everything that the farmer wants to know about the improvement of his roads, even his own personal puzzles, will be solved for him by the government experts on the train.

These government representatives will be experienced highway engineers and will officially represent the U. S. office of public roads.

Within a few days a complete schedule of all the points at which this Good Roads Train will stop will be posted along the lines of the road, and also given in all the local papers.

May Send Troops Across Border.

Washington, Feb. 26.—President Taft soon may be clothed with authority to send American troops across the Mexican border to quell either conditions of anarchy or fighting which might threaten lives or property on this side of the line.

A resolution probably will be introduced in the senate shortly with the knowledge of the administration similar to Stone's last May, which directed the foreign relations committee to ascertain the duty of this government in connection with the killing of Americans by firing from the Mexican side, or it may propose to delegate to President Taft authority to take whatever steps he may deem necessary in an emergency.

The proposed resolution is assumed to be the direct outcome of the conference last Saturday night at the White House between the president and Senators Lodge, Bacon and Stone of the foreign relations committee and Senators Bailey and Culberson of Texas. The president discussed the situation with these senators and being without authority to send troops out of the country without authority from congress, is believed to have explained that a situation might arise which it might be necessary to cross into Mexico to compel the combatants to remove their battle ground to a point safe beyond the American border. Such an act, it was said Sunday, could not be considered an invasion nor an act of war as there was precedent for the landing of marines on foreign territory in the absence of troops from the constituted government to protect foreign residents.

No Spring Elections.

Guthrie, Okla., Feb. 25.—No spring elections will be held in Oklahoma this year in cities that still retain the aldermanic form of government, for the new law governing elections in cities provides that after 1911 members of the city councils and school boards shall be elected only on odd years instead of on the even years, as heretofore. The new law thus provides, too, that hence forward the city council and school board shall consist of but one member from each ward, instead of two, as in the past. The new law practically gives each city, therefore, a commission form of government, few officials, but an aldermanic for men low salaries.

101 RANCH IN PICTURES AT THE DESOTA THEATRE

Managers Katz & Chauncey of the DeSota theatre announce a bran new feature for Wednesday, Feb. 28, only, of this week. They have secured Miller Bros. latest picture entitled "The Reproduction of the 101 Ranch Real Wild West Show." The Miller Bros. have spared neither time or expense on this wonderful production. It consists of three reels and not only shows the complete Wild West program, but gives the public hundreds of little glimpses of the inside of a show employee's life. Commencing with the train's arrival in town we see the unloading, the really wonderful work of the eight, ten and twelve-horse teams pulling heavily loaded wagons out of the railroad yards and up to the show lot, next the canvassmen, driving the stakes, stretching and raising the canvas, then Indians are shown putting up their village next comes the cook house, showing how breakfast is prepared for the 600 employees of the show, and so on down the line, not forgetting the side show, parade, in fact everything up to the performance which is reproduced in detail, act for act throughout the entire program. Mr. Duke R. Lee, a cowboy and fancy rifle shot with the show is here with the pictures and gives an exceptionally interesting lecture on show life as the pictures are shown on the screen.

These pictures are less than three weeks old and will be shown at the DeSota Wednesday night, Feb. 28 only the fourth time shown in Oklahoma.

GRAY HAIR MAKES YOU LOOK OLD

A Simple Remedy Brings Back the Natural Color—Dandruff Quickly Removed.

How often one hears the expression, "She is gray and beginning to look old." It is true that gray hair usually denotes age and is always associated with age. You never hear one referred to as having gray hair and looking young.

The hair is generally the index of age. If your hair is gray, you can't blame your friends for referring to you as looking old. You can't retain a youthful appearance if you allow your hair to grow gray. Many persons of middle age jeopardize their future simply by allowing the gray hair to become faded or gray, try Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation which a chemist by the name of Wyeth devised a few years ago. It is simple, inexpensive and practical, and will banish the gray hairs in a few days. It is also guaranteed to remove dandruff and promote the growth of the hair.

It is a pleasant dressing for the hair, and after using it a few days itching and dryness of the scalp entirely disappear.

Don't neglect your hair. Start using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur today, and you will be surprised at the quick results.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle. Special Agents, Gwin & Mays Drug Co.

NORMAL NEWS

The Athletic Association met at chapel hour today and discussed the base ball prospects. A plan was suggested whereby season tickets would be offered to the people of the town. Eight games have been finally arranged for. Four of them here and four away from home. During the whole season, perhaps something like fifteen games will be played and at least seven of them will be at home.

We're still feeling good about that Oklahoma game.

HOW CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE WAS BROUGHT TO THE U. S.

The suggestion that a gold cap be put on the top of the obelisk in Central Park has recalled to certain residents of the city the time, labor and expense which were employed to bring Cleopatra's Needle from Alexandria, Egypt, about thirty years ago. It was a difficult undertaking and carried out principally through the efforts of William H. Vanderbilt, who supplied the money, and the energy of Lieutenant-Commander H. H. Gorringe of the United States navy and his assistants. Those who are familiar with the history of the monument say that if the gold cap is fastened to the top of the obelisk it will be the only one in the world complete in all its details as designed by the Egyptians.

It was the suggestion of Ismail Pasha, khedive of Egypt that resulted in the obelisk coming to this city. At the opening of the Suez canal in 1869 the khedive offered the obelisk to the United States through William Henry Hubert. The negotiations amounted to little until about eight years later, when William H. Vanderbilt offered to defray the expenses of transporting the obelisk. Much of the correspondence was carried on between Secretary of State Evarts and E. D. Farnen, consul-general to Egypt. But it was not until 1879 that definite preparations were made to bring the obelisk here.

The matter of carrying the obelisk over about 5,000 miles of sea required careful consideration.

Many plans were proposed and finally Lieut.-Commander Gorringe and

S.S.S. NATURE'S CURE FOR BLOOD POISON

S. S. S. is known as Nature's Cure for Contagious Blood Poison because it is prepared entirely from the blood purifying and healing extracts of roots, herbs and barks taken directly from the natural forests of the land. It does not contain the least particle of strong mineral ingredients, and is so prepared as to aid in the rebuilding of every portion of the system, while driving Contagious Blood Poison from the blood. No unpleasant effects ever follow the use of S. S. S., such as stomach troubles, dyspepsia, mercurial rheumatism, etc., as is so often the case where other medicines are used. S. S. S. goes down to the very bottom of the trouble and gently but surely drives out every trace of the disease, cleanses and purifies the circulation, and by its fine vegetable tonic effects, assists the system to rapidly overcome the ravages of the disease, and regain its natural healthful condition. S. S. S. does not cover up or hide the symptoms for awhile, to break out later, but so thoroughly does it remove the cause that no signs of the trouble ever return. S. S. S., Nature's cure, is the surest and safest remedy for Contagious Blood Poison. Home Treatment Book with valuable suggestions and information, and any medical advice free to all who write.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

Lieut. Seaton Schroeder of the United States navy and Frank Price, a foreman of an iron works at Glen Cove, went to Alexandria. Great difficulty was had in obtaining a vessel suitable for the purpose of carrying the obelisk such a long distance. Some idea of the task before the Americans was obtained from the fact that the Paris and London obelisks had been transported in, vessels built specially for the purpose.

When Lieut. Gorringe and his comrades arrived in Alexandria they found that there was much opposition on the part of the foreign residents to the obelisk being taken away.

It was first necessary for the American representatives to get possession of the obelisk. They encountered much opposition, but finally the khedive's minister of foreign affairs turned over to Lieut. Gorringe an order for the obelisk.

This was done so quickly that when the protests came from European consuls and residents foreigners the answer of the khedive was:

"Too late; Cleopatra's Needle is in the possession of the United States officers sent to receive it."

In the latter part of 1879 about 100 Arabs were employed in rigging a scaffold and digging around the obelisk. It took more than a week to lay bare the pedestal and steps to make space enough to construct a caisson in which to transport the obelisk to the port.

When Lieut. Gorringe got his tackle and other machinery in shape, the obelisk was turned horizontally. This was done successfully, although one of the tackles parted. In its horizontal position, the obelisk was forty-three feet above the bottom of the pit. By means of pumps the monument was lowered at an average of about three feet a day until it was finally put in the caisson. The caisson was lowered on the launching ways and after a great deal of work and the use of hydraulic pumps the caisson was launched. A towline was run out to a tug and two anchors were planted off shore with cables leading to the caisson. The first attempt was not carried out because the sea, which had been smooth, suddenly became very rough.

In the meantime the Americans had purchased for about $25,000 the steam er Dessiong, which was built in England in 1864 for the Egyptian government and had been employed in the Egyptian postal service. Careful measurements showed that there was just height enough under the lower deck to carry the obelisk, but the engines and boilers were in bad shape and had to be repaired. As to the size of the Dessiong, if she were still afloat she could be stowed in the hold of one of the big ocean liners to today.

The Dessiong could not be registered under the laws of the United States, so Lieut. Gorringe, boss of the expedition, made the voyage from Alexandria to New York in defiance of all laws and without registry or nationality.

The obelisk was disembarked at Staten Island and carried on pontoons to the foot of West Ninety-sixth street. A roadway was erected over the railroad tracks and the obelisk was hauled over this with such dispatch that a freight train on the road was delayed only about twenty-five minutes. The obelisk was hauled across Ninety-sixth street, thence to Eighty-sixth street to the Eighth avenue entrance of Central Park, across Central Park to Fifth avenue to the Metropolitan Museum gate at Eighty-second street. Thence it was dragged to its present resting place, and on January 20 was ready to be placed vertically on its pedestal.—New York Sun.

Sketch of Life of Wm. Rosenfield.

William Rosenfield, senior member of the firm of Joseph Rosenfield Company, and for the last ten years one of the leading business men here in the ladies' clothing and millinery lines died yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the residence of his son, Joseph Rosenfield, 1171 East Dorothy place. Old age and a general breakdown was the cause of Mr. Rosenfield's death.

Mr. Rosenfield had been in ill health for a long time. For the past three or four years the state of his health has forced him to take no active part in business affairs, the management of the store being left almost entirely to Joseph Rosenfield. He had been growing gradually worse for several months, and his end yesterday did not come as a great surprise to the members of his family and his friends.

Seven of his children who live in other cities in various parts of the Union were notified by wire last night and they are expected to arrive in Memphis in time for the funeral, which will probably occur some time Monday.

Mr. Rosenfield was born in Germany sixty-eight years ago. He came to this country in 1860. In 1866 he settled in Clarksville, Tenn., where he engaged in the ladies' clothing and millinery business. He was successful and built up a big business. About ten years ago, his business having outgrown the little town of Clarksville, he moved to Memphis and became interested with his son in what is now the Joseph Rosenfield Company. He was actively engaged in this business until about four years ago, when failing health forced his retirement.

About the time he went to Clarksville Mr. Rosenfield married and nine children were born to him, eight of whom, with the wife, Mrs. Bertha Rosenfield survive. The children now living are Lee Rosenfield, Brooklyn, N. Y., Louis Rosenfield, Ada, Okla.; Arthur Rosenfield, San Antonio, Tex.; Clarence Rosenfield, Fort Worth, Tex.; Robert Rosenfield, Dallas, Tex.; Mrs. David Gottlieb, San Antonio, Tex.; Mrs. Albert Leibler, Henderson, Ky.; and Joseph Rosenfield, of this city.

Other than that the funeral will occur some time Monday, the arrangements have not been made.—Commercial Appeal.

After Auto Thieves.

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 27.—Thefts of more than $150,000 worth of high-power touring cars during the last year has prompted the Spokane retail dealers' association to offer a reward of $100 for information leading to the capture and conviction of the culprits. L. W. Hodgins, president of the association, thinks it is the work of an organized band that has worked in various large cities in the Pacific Northwest. "If $100 is not sufficient," he said, "the dealers can well afford to increase the reward to $1,000, in an effort to stop this evil, which is now more widespread than was horse stealing in the palmy days of the hustlers. Formal action will be taken at a meeting called for March 4." Chief Doust admits that the local police have not been able to follow a single clue and is of the opinion that the stolen machines are disposed of elsewhere. The railroad companies declare they have no record of the transporting of cars to points out of Spokane, hence it is thought the thieves drive them under their own power to remote points.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—The story opens on Long Island near New York City, where Miss Emily French, a relative of Ethan French, manufacturer of the celebrated "Mercury" automobile, loses her way. The car has stopped and her cousin Dick French is too muddled with drink to direct it aright. They meet another car named Lestrangle. The latter fixes up the French car and directs Miss French that her cousin is in no condition to accompany her, but she is to be thankful.

CHAPTER II.—Ethan French has disappeared. He is growing old and tells Emily that she is the only one of the family to whom he can leave his wealth. He informs her that he has a good-natured, but irresponsible fellow.

CHAPTER III.—It appears that a partner of Ethan French, wanting an expert to race with the "Mercury" at auto events, has engaged Lestrangle, and at the French factory Emily encounters the young man. They refer pleasantly to their first meeting when Dick comes along and recognizes the young racer.

CHAPTER IV.—Dick likes the way Lestrangle ignores their first meeting when he appeared to a disadvantage. They become quite friendly and Lestrangle tells out of her indifference cousin and educates him to an automobile expert.

CHAPTER V.—Dick undertakes his business schooling under the tutelage of Lestrangle. She is sheer grit, and in making a test race meets with an accident. Lestrangle sticks to him bravely, Emily disclaims any intention of marrying her.

Shaken and tremulous, Dick passed a damp hand across his forehead.

"I think you're mad to stand talking here. Come to the office, for heaven's sake. And, I'd be ground up there, if you hadn't caught me," he looked toward the jaws sullenly shredding and shredding a strip of cloth from his sleeve. "I'll do anything you want."

"Will you?" Lestrangle flashed quickly. He flung back his head with the resolute setting of expression the other knew so well, his eyes brilliant with a resolve that took no heed of physical discomfort. "Then give me your word that you'll stick to your work here. That is my fear; that the change in you is just a mood you'll tire of some day. I want you to stand up to your work and not drop out disqualified."

"I will," said Dick, subdued and earnest. "I couldn't help doing it—your arm."

Lestrangle impatiently dragged out his handkerchief and wound it around the bit.

"Go on."

"I can't help keeping on; I couldn't go back now. You've got me awake. No one else ever tried, and I was having a good time. It began with liking you and thinking of all you did, and feeling funny alongside of you." He paused, struggling with Anglo-Saxon shyness. "I'm awfully fond of you, old fellow."

The other's gray eyes warmed and cleared. Smiling, he held out his left hand.

"It's mutual," he assured. "It isn't playing the game to trap you while you are upset like this. But I don't believe you'll be sorry. Come find some one to tie this up for me; I can't have it stiff tomorrow."

But in spite of his professed haste, Lestrangle stopped at the head of the stairs and went back to recover some small object lying on the floor beneath a pool of chilling metal. When he rejoined Dick, it was to linger yet a moment to look back across the teeming room.

"It's worth having, all this," he commented, with the first touch of sadness the other ever had seen in him. "Don't throw it away, French."

There was usually a surgeon within reach of a factory. When Mr. French passed out to the cart where Emily waited, he passed Dick and the village physician entering. The elder gentleman put on his glasses to survey his nephew's white face.

"An accident?" he inquired.

The casual curiosity was sufficiently exasperating, and Dick's nerves were badly gone.

"Nothing worth mentioning," he snapped. "Just that I nearly fell into the machinery and Lestrangle has done up his arm pulling me out."

That's all."

And he hurried the doctor on with out further parley or excuse.

Lestrangle was in the room behind the office, smoking one of Bailey's cigars and listening to that gentleman's vigorous remarks concerning managers who couldn't keep out of their own machinery, the patient not having considered it worth while to explain Dick's share in the mischance. An omission which Dick himself promptly remedied in his anxious contrition.

Later, when the arm was being swathed in white linen, its owner spoke to his companion of the morning:

"I hope you didn't annoy Miss French with this trifling matter, as you came in."

"I didn't speak to her at all, only to my uncle."

"Very good."

Something in the too-indolent tone roused Dick's usually dormant observation. Startled, he scrutinized Lestrangle.

"Is that why you bothered yourself with me?" he stammered. "Is that why—"

"Shut up!" warned Lestrangle forcibly and inelegantly. "That isn't tight enough, Doc. You know I'm experienced at this sort of thing, and I'm going to use this arm."

But Dick was not to be silenced in his new enlightenment. When the surgeon momentarily turned away, he leaned nearer, his plump face grim.

"If I brace up, it won't be for Emily, but for you, Darling Lestrangle," he whispered viciously. "She don't want me and I don't want her, that way. I've got over that. And, and—oh, confound it, I'm sorry, old man!"

"Shut up!" said Lestrangle again.

But though Dick's very sympathy unconsciously showed the hopeless chasm between the racing driver and Miss French, the hurt did not cloud the cordial smile Lestrangle sent to mitigate his command.

CHAPTER VI.

Emily first heard the full story of the accident that evening, when Dick sat opposite her on the veranda and gave the account in frank anxiety and dejection.

"We're going down tonight on the nine o'clock train," he added in conclusion. "Tomorrow morning he'll spend practicing on the track, and tomorrow evening at 6 the race starts. And Lestrangle starts crippled because I am a clumsy idiot. He laughs at me, but he'd do that anyhow."

"Yes," agreed Emily. "He would do that anyhow." Her eyes were wide and terrified, the little hands she clasped in her lap were quite cold. "I wish, I wish he had never come to this place."

"Oh, you do?" Dick said oddly. "Maybe he will, too, before he gets through with us. We're a nasty lot, we Frenches; a lot of blue-blooded snobs without any red blood in us. Are you going to say good-by to me? I won't be home until it's over."

She looked at him, across the odorous dusk slowly silvering as the moon rose.

"You are going to be with him?"

Dick smoothed his leggings before standing up, surveying his strict motor costume with a gloomy pride not to be concealed.

"Yes; I'm representing our company. Lestrangle might want some backing if any disputes turned up. Uncle Ethan nearly had a fit when Bailey told him what I was going to do; he called me Richard for the first time in my life. I guess I'll be some good yet, if every one except Lestrangle did think I was a chump."

"I am very sure you will," she answered gently. "Good-by, Dick; you look very nice."

When he reached the foot of the steps, her voice recalled him, as she stood leaning over the rail.

"Dick, you could not make him give it up, not race this time?"

He stared up at her white figure.

"No, I could not. Don't you suppose I tried?"

"I suppose you did," she admitted, and went back to her seat.

The June night was very quiet. Once a sleepy bird stirred in the honeysuckle vines and chirped through the dark. Far below the throb of a motor passed down the road, dying away again to leave silence. Suddenly Emily French hid her face on the arm of her chair and the tears overflowed.

There was no consciousness of time while that inarticulate passion of dread spent itself. But it was nearly half an hour later when she started up at the echo of a light step on the gravel path, dashing her handkerchief across her eyes.

It was incredible, but it was true: Lestrangle himself was standing before her at the foot of the low stairs, the moonlight glinting across his uncovered bronze head and bright, clear face.

"I beg pardon for trespass, Miss French," he said, "but your cousin tells me he has been saying a great deal of nonsense to you about this race, and that you were so very good as to feel some concern regarding it. Really, I had to run up and set that right; I couldn't leave you to be annoyed by Mr. French's nerves. Will you forgive me?"

Like sun through a mist his blithe

voice cleaved through her distress. Before the tranquil sanity of his regard, her painted terrors suddenly showed as the artificial canvas scenes of a stage, unreal, untrue.

"It was like you to come," she answered, with a shaking sigh that was half sob. "I was frightened, yes."

"There is no cause. A dozen other men take the same chance as Rupert and I; the driver who alternates with me, for instance. This is our life."

"Your arm—"

"Is well enough." He laughed a little. "You will see many a bandaged arm before the twenty-four hours are up; few of us finish without a scratch or strain or blister. This is a man's game, but it's not half so destructive as foot-ball. You wished me good luck for the Georgia race; will you repeat the honor before I go back to French?"

"I wish you," she said unsteadily. "every kind of success, now and always. You saved Dick today—of all else you have done for him and for me I have not words to speak. But it made it harder to bear the thought of your hurt and risk from the hurt, when I knew that I had sent Dick there, who caused it."

Lestrangle hesitated, himself troubled. Her soft loveliness in the delicate light that left her eyes unreadable depths of shadow, her timidity and anxiety for his safety, were from their very unconsciousness most dangerous. And while he grasped at self-control, she came still nearer to the head of the steps and held out her small fair hand, mistaking his silence for leave-taking.

"Good night; and I thank you for coming. I am not used to so much consideration."

Her accents were unsure when she would have made them most certain, with her movement the handkerchief fell from her girdle to his feet. Mechanically Lestrangle recovered the bit of linen, and felt it lie wet in his fingers. Wet—

"Emily!" he cried abruptly, and sprang the brief step between them.

Her white, terrified face turned to him in the moonlight, but he saw her eyes. And seeing, he kissed her.

Her Accents Were Unsure When She Would Have Made Them Most Certain.

The moment left no time for speech. Some one was coming down the drawing-room toward the long windows. Dick's impatient whistle sounded shrilly from the park. Panting, quivering, Emily drew from the embrace and fled within.

She had no doubt of Lestrangle, no question of his serious meaning—he had that force of sincerity which made his silence more convincing than the protestations of others. But alone in her room she laid her cheek against the hand he had touched.

"I wish I had died in the convent," she cried to her heart. "I wish I had died before I made him unhappy too."

CHAPTER VII.

Morning found a pale and languid Emily across the breakfast table from Mr. French. Yet, by a contradiction of the heart, her pride in loving and being loved so overbore the knowledge that only sorrow could result to herself and Lestrangle, that her eyes shone wide and lustrous and her lips curved softly.

Mr. French was almost in high spirits.

"The boy was merely developing," he stated, over his grape-fruit. "I have been unjust to Richard. For two months Bailey has been talking of his interest in the business and attendance at the factory, but I was incredulous. Although I fancied I observed a change—have you observed a change in him, Emily?"

"Yes," Emily confirmed, "a very great change. He has grown up, at last."

"Ah? I cannot express to you how it gratifies me to have a French representing me in public; have you seen the morning journals?"

"I have just come down stairs."

He picked up the newspaper beside him and passed across the folded page.

SENATOR RODDIE ENTERS DENIAL

To the Editor of the Ada News:

The following quotation I take from your paper of the 26th inst., and feeling that you are willing to give everyone a square deal I ask that you publish my answer to this since it places me in a rather ridiculous light to have such a quotation published. The article is as follows:

According to the report of the state convention published in the Dallas News, Senator Roddie declared that the demand for a special session of the legislature in this section is so strong that his senatorial district would foot the bill if one should be called. The session would cost only about $30,000 and no doubt that beggarly sum could be raised some morning before breakfast. Who will head the list with about $5,000?

Anyone with an ounce of sense would know that I never made use of such a statement, while the reporter is somewhat excusable for quoting me thus since there was somewhere between 2000 and 3000 office holders in the galleries shouting at the top of their voices to prevent anyone from answering the governor. Therefore it was almost impossible for every thing that a speaker stated to be heard and understood by every one.

The language that I used was practically the same as that used before our county convention on the 17th inst., which I here and now reiterate, to-wit: "That should an extra session of the legislature be called and the contemplations of this provision of the platform put into legislation namely, the abolishing of town ship boards and the abolishing and consolidating of County and State officers would save to the tax-payers of my Senatorial district in one year enough money to pay the expenses of the legislature for the entire state."

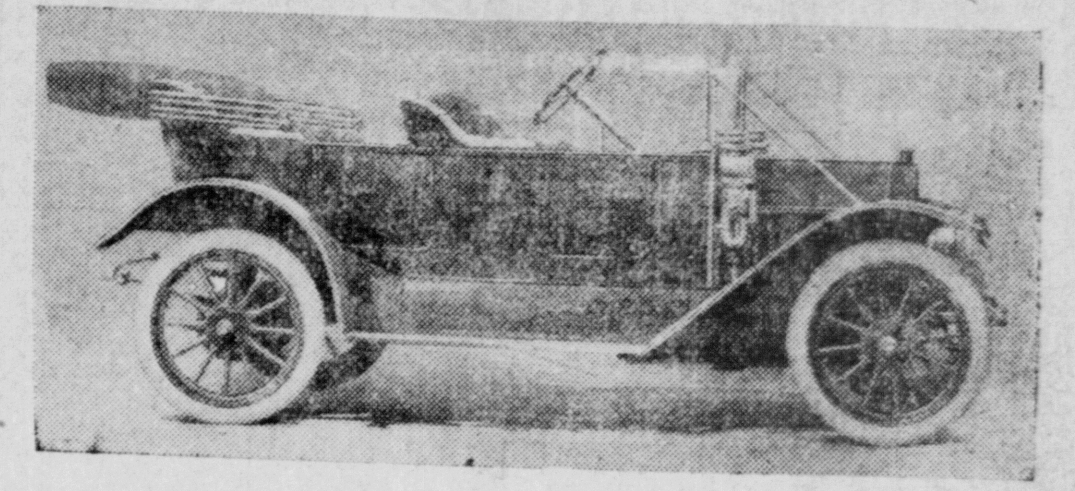

Respectfully,
REUBEN M. RODDIE.

Following is the quotation in the Dallas News upon which the clipping above was based:

"Senator Roddie reached the platform amid much commotion and cheers for Gov. Cruce, and it was some minutes before Chairman Linebaugh could get the audience to listen. Roddie said that he came with the commission of Pontotoc county for a special session. The democracy is not in half as good condition now as it was in 1908, the senator said. Under the automatic reapportionment the house would have ninety-four members, and applying the 1908 election returns, he said, there would be elected forty-six democrats and forty-eight republicans.

Gov. Cruce answered that applying to the vote he received there would be seventy-six democrats in the house. Roddie said that the party had advantage of the grandfather clause in 1910 and the governor's comparison was not fair. "My senatorial district," said Roddie, "will pay the bill of an extra session."

FOR AGED PEOPLE

Old Folks Should Be Careful in Their Selection of Regulative Medicine.

We have a safe, dependable, and altogether ideal remedy that is particularly adapted to the requirements of aged people and persons of weak constitutions who suffer from constipation or other bowel disorders. We are so certain that it will relieve these complaints and give absolute satisfaction in every particular that we offer it with our personal guarantee that it shall cost the user nothing if it fails to substantiate our claims. This remedy is called Rexall Orderlies.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity. Three sizes, 10c, 25c, and 50c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store—Gwin & Mays Drug Co.
